When I was 6 years old, my family had a telephone. I remember the telephone on the table. But I was too little to use it. I could only listen to my mother talk on it.

One day my mother went out to visit a neighbor. I hurt my finger(割伤手指) when I was playing. I walked around the house, finally seeing the telephone. I didn't know my parents' number so I called the number of my birthday. "Hello, this is Paul." A small clear voice spoke into my ear, "Hello, this is Sally."

"I hurt my finger..." I cried into the phone.

"Isn't your mother at home?" came the question.

"Nobody is at home but me," I cried. "Are you bleeding?" the voice asked.

"No," I replied. "I hit my finger and it hurts."

"Can you open your icebox?" she asked. I said I could.

"Then take a little piece of ice and put it onto your finger," said the voice.

After that, I called for everything. I asked her to help with my geography and she told me where the Amazon(亚马逊河) was. She seemed to know everything. We became close friends because she was always there to listen. From then on, we shared everything about happiness and sadness.

Then, there was the time my pet bird died. I called and told Sally the sad story. "Why is it that birds sing so beautifully and bring happiness to all families, only to end up in death?" She listened, then said slowly, "Paul, always remember that there are other worlds to sing in." Hearing that, I felt better.

Twenty years later, when I called the number 1-9-8-3-0-5-2-7 again, a different voice told me Sally died on Christmas five days before. Sally left a message for me. The note said, "I still say there are other worlds to sing in." I thanked her and hung up. I knew what Sally meant.

Imagine this: Your parents go away for work, but you have to stay at home by yourself. Would life be as easy as when your parents are around? Would it be a wonderful holiday for you?

"I can cook tomato and egg soup, but that's all. I think many of my classmates are the same," said Li Yujie, a girl from a middle school. "But I always forget things. I watch television then burn the soup."

"Now parents do almost everything for us. So we don't know what we can do and how to look after ourselves." Li Yujie said.

Usually teenagers spend most of their time doing their homework. They don't learn any life skills(技能) until they finish high school. However, Simon doesn't think so. "I think I am OK. I know how to cook some dishes because my mom showed me." the 13-year-old boy said. In his opinion, many teenagers depend(依靠) too much on their parents, and there is much more to learn than cooking, like "cleaning up your room or even dressing yourself properly." For most teenagers, it wouldn't be a holiday at all. It could be a time to learn to be independent(自立的) and take care of yourself.
